The time has come for the great powers to find a way at once to stand still and resume the course of negotiation. What is needed is a simple and quick demonstration of their readiness to do so.

I therefore call upon all governments concerned to accept the following:

(a) Immediate stationing of UN Observer forces at all medium and long-range missile sites outside the territory of the four nuclear powers to insure that such sites are not operational, and that no nuclear material is stored.

(b) When such UN Observer forces are in position, the Heads of Government of the nations participating in the Geneva Disarmament Conference to meet there to give urgent attention to the reduction of tension and the compelling necessities of disarmament.
